done it with our Federal balanced budget. We have tried to do it in a responsible manner. And here in education with our seven key principles: quality education, better teaching, local control, which is so important, accountability. It is so important to have education accountability, dollars to the classroom, not to the bureacracy, not to administration, not to Washington control or mandates, but dollars to the classroom where they are most needed.

And not telling each school district they have got to use this money only for this or that. They know, the parents know, the principals know how to use those dollars.

Then parental involvement and responsibility. Responsibility which is so important in our society. Sometimes it is a word that is forgotten. No one wants to be responsible. And certainly we have had some 8 years of people not taking responsibility, of also promoting a nonresponsible society. That must change, because we must be responsible. We must be accountable. And our young people must also be ingrained with that philosophy if they are to succeed.

So we want to, again, take this message to the American people this afternoon, my fellow Members of Congress. We are pleased to compare what we have done, what we said we would do, and what we have accomplished and what we want to do for the future. We have a great model that we have presented.

Sure we have made mistakes. Republicans are human too. Sure, we have not done everything the way we should do. But I can tell my colleagues that this is not the time to turn to irresponsible management of the Congress, irresponsible management of the District of Columbia, irresponsible management over Social Security or Medicare that the other side let go. This is the time to be responsible, to have programs for the future based on sound experiences of the past.

Today, I have been able to hopefully outline some of what we have done; what I have been able to do as a Member of this distinguished body. And we are here to do the people's business and do it with honor, and on a bipartisan basis. But, again, the American people must be aware of the facts, particularly as we approach this most important generational election. This is a critical election; and we do not want to turn back to 1993, 1994, 1995, to tax and spend and regulate and administrate from Washington in an irresponsible manner.

Mr. Speaker, this is the time for responsibility. It is the time for us to really reflect upon the accomplishments that we can point to at this juncture. With that, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate you taking time and the staff taking time as the House concludes its business this afternoon and returns on Monday. Thank you so much for the opportunity to present this special order.
